World Mission Day: That the celebration of World Mission Day may help all Christians realize that we are not only receivers but proclaimers of God's word.

The rich and the poor

The story of Lazarus and the rich man reflects the current issue of poverty and social justice. There is a perpetual conflict between the rich and poor. The rich disregard and often exploit the poor for their own interests. The poor are often seen as a threat to the prosperity and security of the rich. On the other hand, the poor have ambitions of becoming rich or at least they yearn to live a decent and fulfilling life. There is a struggle for material and financial resources, which seem limited and fleeting. Eventually, only a few rich control the world's resources while the majority wallows in poverty. One asks: how can social justice be achieved through equal distribution of resources? Who is willing to stand up for the poor and help them in their dire needs?

The gospel provides a consolation for those who are needy and abandoned. God will provide for the victims of injustice and those who are suffering due to others' greed and selfishness. The gospel is good news for the poor but bad news for the rich, who live a luxurious life at the expense of others. However, the gospel is clearly not romanticizing poverty. Starvation and distress are conditions which should be overcome. It is false to make a virtue out of deficiency. One needs to distinguish between poverty and the poor. The former must be eradicated. The latter must be elevated. Pope Francis reminds us of this challenge when he says: "The church should be a church for the poor."

This Christian call for shared social responsibility and appeal for generosity may be difficult in our times when the financial and Euro-crisis is not yet over, when unemployment is still high, and a decent living does not happen automatically, even if one is living in Germany. Nevertheless, a small gesture of goodness and generosity can still work wonders. We are asked to look beyond the confines of our daily preoccupations and concerns. Jesus is in our midst, especially among the poor. Let us bridge the gap between ourselves and our brothers and sisters in need.
