The joy of the Gospel

No Church document, since the Second Vatican Council, has touched me so much as Pope Francis' Apostolic Letter Evangelii Gaudium. It is nothing less than a blueprint of the Church of tomorrow. Unlike many other Vatican documents it is written in a simple language that also lay people can understand it. It is not just about reorganizing or restructuring the Church as an institution, but takes us back to the roots of our faith: to the person of Jesus, his challenging message, the central mission of the Church and all her members to bring that good news of great joy to the world.

Evangelii Gaudium takes also a critical look at the world which badly needs the message of the Gospel. Pope Francis speaks of our present economic system as one that kills. Instead of serving the true needs of human beings, it forces people to serve the demands of financial markets. It does not only exploit people, it excludes many from a dignified life. Christians must struggle so the common good and the dignity of people can take a central place in political and economic thinking.

Pope Francis also sees the Church as turned toward herself and urges all Christians to move out and evangelize wherever they live and work. Following the example of Jesus, he wants us to reach out especially to the poor and the weak. Would that not be a key question for parish councils and all groups to find out where the poor are in their own contexts and how their lives can be improved?

In the opening paragraphs the Pope speaks to each one of us. He sees many Christians "caught up in their own interests and concerns", in "the desolation and anger born of a complacent yet covetous heart" and in "the feverish pursuit of frivolous pleasures". That is not where real happiness is to be found. Francis invites us to break out of the prison of our own selves to the needs of others in order to find the source of true joy. "The joy of the Gospel fills the hearts and lives of all who encounter Jesus. Those who accept his offer of salvation are set free from sin, sorrow, inner emptiness and loneliness. With Christ joy is constantly born anew." Let us experience that joy and share it with others!
