World Mission Sunday

Mission Sunday reminds us of Jesus' mandate to go the world and bring the Good News to all nations. But how can we evangelize our world today as Pope Francis keeps urging us? Let me illustrate three elements from the way Christianity spread in a country I know well: Uganda.

What persuaded people in Uganda to become Christians? The examples of the first missionaries. People watched these strangers very closely and saw that they were men of prayer. They got up early before sunrise to pray together. They were also deeply impressed by the way they cared for the sick making no distinction between people. If we wish to evangelize our secularized society in Germany, we must become people of prayer, putting God first in our lives. And we must show love and concern especially for the uncared for. In other words, we must live in a radical, uncompromising manner the commandment to love God and neighbor.

The first missionaries who came to Uganda had only a few years to spread the Gospel before political trouble made them flee to a neighboring country leaving behind a community of about 80 Christians, most of them catechumens. When they could return years later they found that the number of Christians had increased tenfold. Without the help of priests or religious these young Ugandan Christians had spoken about the new faith in Jesus to their friends and families and enkindled the fire of faith in others. The Catholic faith in Africa was spread not so much by missionaries, but rather by ordinary lay people. The New Evangelization of which the Pope speaks and which is so needed in Europe will have to be the work of lay people who radiate the joy of the Good News in their own families, neighborhood and workplace unreachable by priests.

After 10 years, persecution broke out in Uganda and dozens of Christians chose to die rather than deny their faith in Christ. 22 of them were canonized by the Church 50 years ago. The "blood of martyrs became the seed of new Christians", as St. Irenäus said of the early martyrs. Throughout history, the church grew under persecution. Never has there been such a widespread persecution of Christians as today, especially in Muslim countries. Even in Europe, where we enjoy religious freedom, it can take great courage to stand up for one's faith when it means that you are ridiculed or disadvantaged. Do we have the courage of the early Christians in Uganda and other "mission" countries who are ready to suffer and die for Christ?
